THE SPECTRAL METAPHOR

Living Ghosts and the Agency of Invisibility

ESTHER PEEREN
The Spectral Metaphor
Also by Esther Peeren

INTERSUBJECTIVITIES AND POPULAR CULTURE: Bakhtin and Beyond

POPULAR GHOSTS: The Haunted Spaces of Everyday Culture (co-edited with María del Pilar Blanco)

REPRESENTATION MATTERS: (Re)Articulating Collective Identities in a Postcolonial World (co-edited with Anette Hoffmann)

THE SHOCK OF THE OTHER: Situating Alterities (co-edited with Silke Horstkotte)

THE SPECTRALITIES READER: Ghosts and Haunting in Contemporary Cultural Theory (co-edited with María del Pilar Blanco)
The Spectral Metaphor

Living Ghosts and the Agency of Invisibility

Esther Peeren

Department of Media Studies, University of Amsterdam, The Netherlands
To my brother Jeroen – for knowing how to live to the end
This page intentionally left blank
Contents

List of Figures viii
Acknowledgments ix

Introduction: The Spectral Metaphor 1

1 Forms of Invisibility: Undocumented Migrant Workers as Living Ghosts in Stephen Frears’s Dirty Pretty Things and Nick Broomfield’s Ghosts 33

2 Spectral Servants and Haunting Hospitalities: Upstairs, Downstairs, Gosford Park and Babel 76

3 Spooky Mediums and the Redistribution of the Sensible: Sarah Waters’s Affinity and Hilary Mantel’s Beyond Black 110

4 Ghosts of the Missing: Multidirectional Haunting and Self-Spectralization in Ian McEwan’s The Child in Time and Bret Easton Ellis’s Lunar Park 144

Afterword: How to Survive as a Living Ghost? 180

Notes 185
Bibliography 198
Index 208

vii